- ❑ Why are ERN so important to hospitals ?
- ❑ How hospital managers see their role and how can they support ERN ?
- ❑ How can hospital managers increase their support ?

- ❑ By hospitals, we mean :
 - ✓ The hospital where the coordinator of the ERN is
 - ✓ The hospitals which participate to the network

- ❑ The profile of hospital managers throughout Europe is quite variable: some are doctors, some are researchers, some are administrators

A greater competition in the research sector by 2030

-  North America will still be powerful
-  Asia will have risen considerably

Why are ERN so important to hospitals ? (2/3)

ERN are very structured networks focused on promoting excellence for best health care

Their aim is to facilitate discussion on complex or rare diseases and conditions that require highly specialized treatment, concentrated knowledge and resources

ERN are scientific and organisational leaders in their fields

- ✓ Promote the best practices in prevention, diagnosis and safe clinical care across Europe
- ✓ Disseminate cutting-edge knowledge and facilitate continuing medical education in the field of research and development
- ✓ Foster European cooperation in highly specialized procedures for diagnosis, innovative treatments and research

ERN = leverage

→ ERN are references

→ ERN are leaders

Why are ERN so important to hospitals ? (3/3)

Structuring networking

Providing expertise

Spreading digital transformation

ERN = models

Concentrating resources

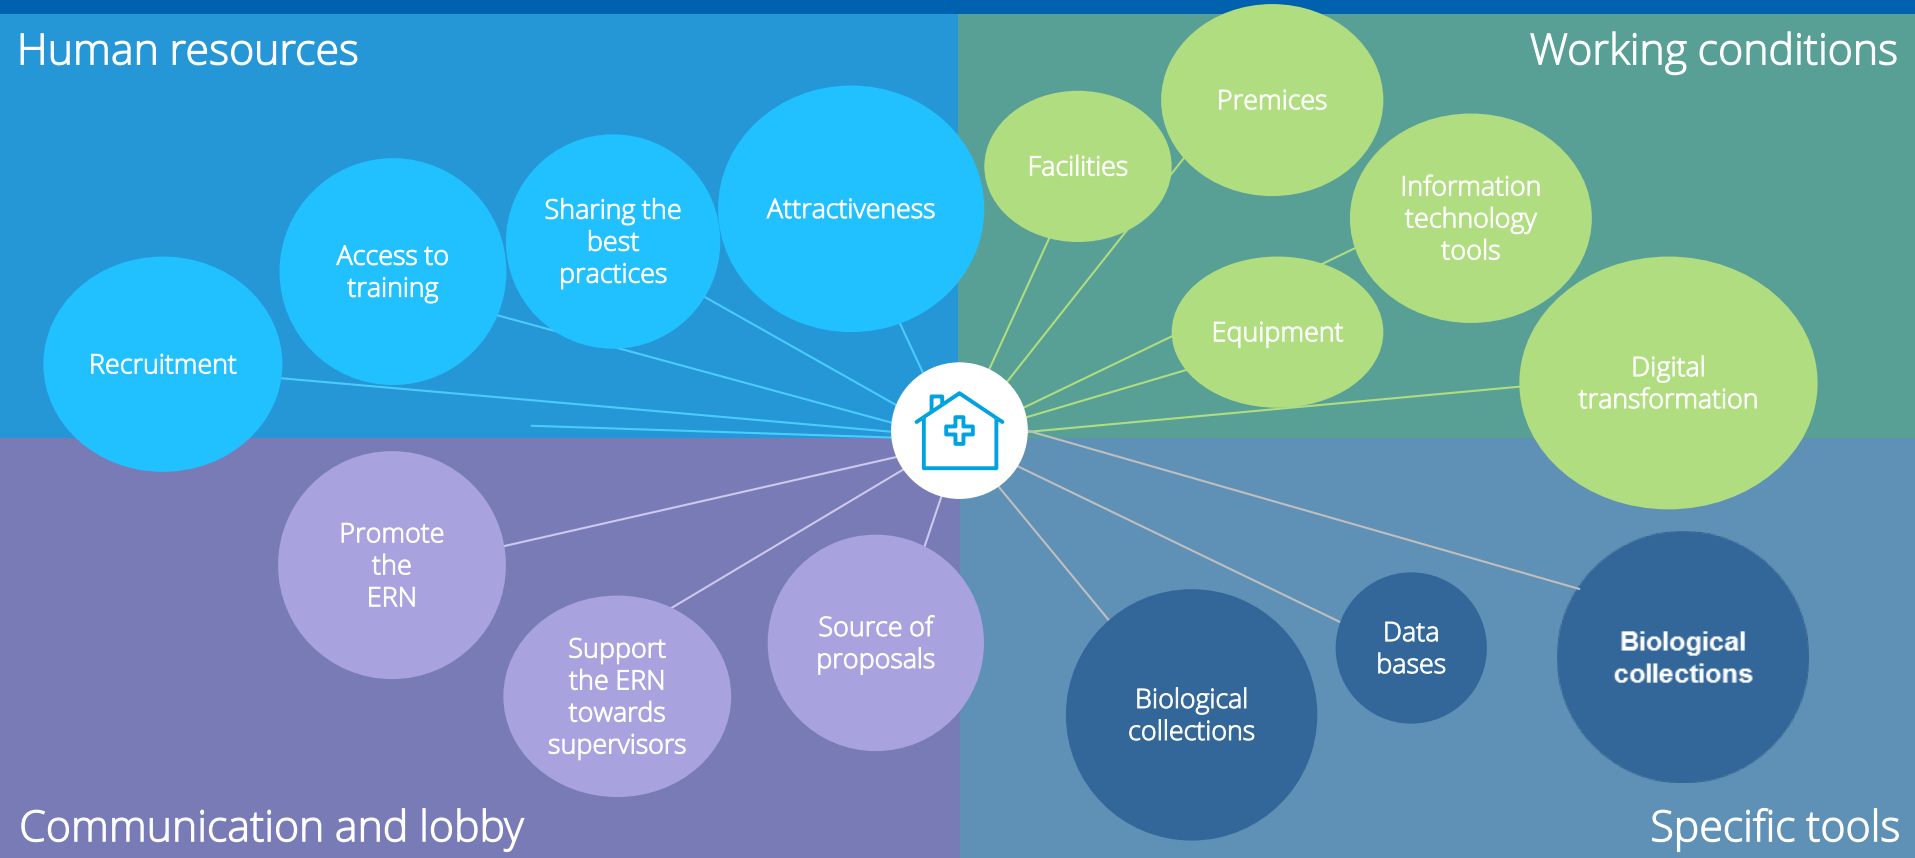

Promoting the best practices

Providing inter-professional consultation

How hospital managers see their role and how can they support ERN ?

A durable economic constraint

How can hospital managers increase their support ?

Learn from their own experience :

- ✓ Capitalize on experience
- ✓ Experience feedback between hospitals of a same country

Learn from other experiences :

- ✓ Experience feedback between all European hospitals
- ✓ Sharing the best practices and the good ideas
