

Dear Sirs

Yusen Logistics is a major transport provider for pharmaceutical products across Europe carrying over 1 million pallets of API to Finished Products – with key clients such as Astra Zeneca / GlaxoSmithKline / Bristol Myers Squibb.

As an experienced individual working for many years with the industry sector I would comment on “Deliveries to Customers Section 25 d) and Section 27”.

- We suggest that the transport activity is not clear enough in requiring temperature controlled conditions of transport to ensure that products “are not subjected to unacceptable degrees of heat, cold etc”.
- It is subjective for each manufacturer/distributor to decide on mode of transport whereas we would offer that it should be regulatory that all product is moved under temperature controlled conditions with temperature records of all journeys to guarantee compliance.

Our experience shows a significant variance between differing pharmaceutical companies across Europe – both licensed and generic manufacturers - in selecting modes of transport in relation to temperature – both impacted by seasons and geographics.

For the future benefit of GDP regulations and to take away any doubt or ‘interpretation’ of recommendations, the European Commission should consider it is time to state that all pharma products, from API through to finished products – must be transported under temperature controlled conditions.

Please note that comments are of a personal nature and do not necessarily represent the views of the Company.

Kind regards

Clive Lester
